

16. Parenting A Teenager

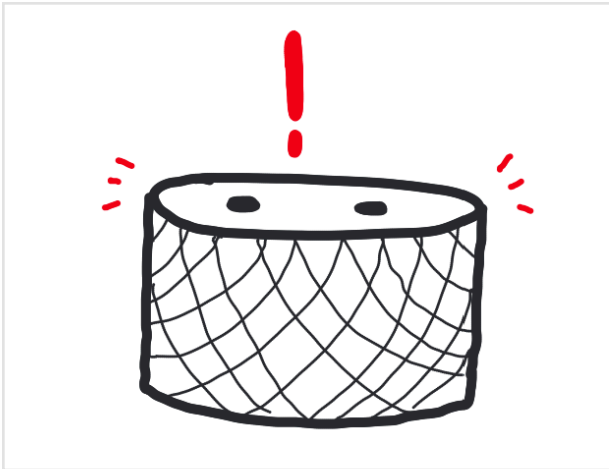

Jane and John are not sure how to handle their teenage daughter, Abby.

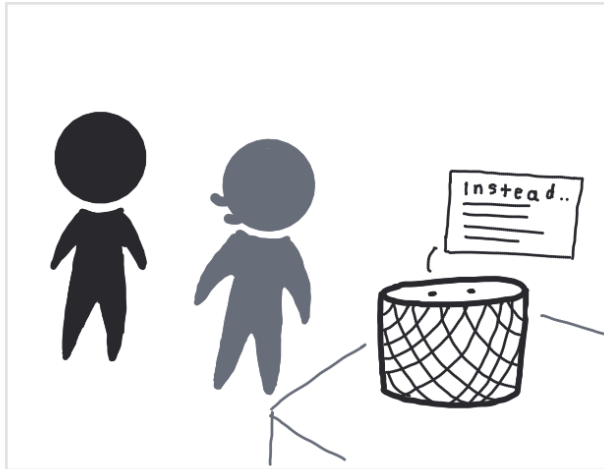

As a result, they sign up to a parenting service that produces parenting advice from their agent.

One day, Abby comes back hours past curfew, and Jane and John respond leniently.

The agent detects that the language they chose to use was too soft.

The agent advises that the parents should use a stricter approach and trains them on how to respond next time.
